Dear Russ;

last Monday. He was in Washington only for one day, having come down from Atlantic City where he was attending the International Communications Conference.

He was the guest of the FCC and consequently I was not able to do as much for him as I would like to have done. Mr. Frank Kratochvil of FCC picked me up at the office early Monday morning. We in turn picked up [redacted] and showed him [redacted] our Washington office. We had lunch with Mr. Sterling of FCC, so I did not even have the pleasure of having him to lunch.

He certainly seemed to be a very fine gentleman. He was most interested in our operations and in our cooperative arrangement with [redacted] I told him that [redacted] and company would probably be coming in connection with pursuing our recent reciprocal negotiations, and he especially requested that I let him know when they were coming so he could be on the lookout for them. I shall certainly do this, but thought you might like to contact [redacted] prior to your departure.

I have just received your message stating that the outcome of the negotiations was favorable, and we are all pleased.

General Sibert left today on what I believe is a 30-day trip, and so it appears that in any case our survey team with General Sibert as its head will not depart from Washington for another 30 days.

Sincerely,
